Website content

FRUKit aims to provide useful, accurate and practical information about technology, digital tools, websites, software, AI, automation and related subjects.

Every reasonable effort is made to keep information accurate and up to date. However, technology changes quickly and information published on this website should not be treated as a guarantee that a particular product, service, software feature or technical method will remain available or suitable for every situation.

Where a specific decision could have significant financial, legal, security or other consequences, visitors should obtain appropriate professional advice before acting.

Intellectual property

Unless otherwise stated, the text, graphics, illustrations, photographs, branding and other original material published on this website are the property of FRUKit or are used with permission.

They may not be reproduced, republished, modified or distributed for commercial purposes without prior permission.

Links to FRUKit content are welcome, provided that they do not imply endorsement, partnership or affiliation where none exists.

External links

FRUKit may occasionally provide links to external websites or services where these are useful to visitors.

FRUKit does not control those external websites and is not responsible for their content, availability, security or privacy practices.

Personal data and cookies

FRUKit processes certain personal information when visitors use the website, including when they submit an enquiry through the contact form.

The website also uses cookies and similar technologies for essential website functions, consent management and, where consent is given, website statistics.

Full information about how personal data is handled is provided in the Privacy & Data Protection notice.

Information about cookies and consent is provided in the Cookie Policy.
